Primary malignant cerebral lymphoma is rare and difficult to diagnose. We studied the diagnosis of primary malignant cerebral lymphoma by cytology, flow cytometry, and polymerase chain reaction (PCR) and reviewed the literature. We performed flow cytometry (FCM) and immunostaining on cytologic materials from a lesion in the right parietal lobe and identified T-cell clones, including cytotoxic T lymphocytes, in the lesion. We used fluorescent PCR to detect Epstein-Barr virus (EBV)-related sequences. Microscopic examination showed T-cell clones with cl f678ea9f9e
